- 6.1
- The agreement must be legal.
 - The parties must have contractual capacity.
 - The agreement must not be vague.
 - The parties must communicate their intentions to each other.
 - The parties must be of the same mind on the subject matter.
 - Performance must be possible.
 - The necessary formalities must be observed. (Any 5 × 1) (5)
- 6.2 An offer is like a proposal where a person expresses willingness to be part of a contract, e.g. by going to a travel agency and offer to pay for what is advertised. An advertisement is not an offer.
- An offer must be accepted before a contract is legally binding. Acceptance take place after an offer is made, for e.g. the travel agency will accept the payment and take your details to make the contract binding. (2 + 2) (4)

- 6.6
- 6.6.1 There must be a marriage contract in place before marriage can be out of community of property. Each spouse owns and administrates his/her own affairs and should there be a divorce each spouse keeps what is his/hers.
- 6.6.2 A marriage contract that stipulates the accrual system must be signed before the marriage. Each spouse will have his/her own assets coming into the marriage but whatever is acquired after marriage will be a joint estate. If there is a divorce the joint estate will be divided equally and everything brought into the marriage will be kept by the specific spouse.
- 6.6.3 When there is no contract signed before the marriage the spouses will be married in community of property. Everything the spouses own before and during the marriage will be part of the joint estate. Should there be a divorce, everything will be divided equally.
